Biography

Charles Duprey Langlois, professionally known as Charlie Duprey, is a mindful musician and music business entrepreneur. Charlie Duprey derives purpose from his passions for sports, musicianship, and education. He works diligently to stay connected to his passions and build connections with athletes, musicians, and young professionals.

He garnered essential exposure to design and art via his higher education at Georgia Tech and Georgia State University. Charlie Duprey earned his Bachelor of Science degree in Music Technology Management from the Georgia State University School of Music in the Fall of 2022. At Georgia State, Charlie Duprey performed with the University Singers, Treble-Bass Choir, and Choral Union. With the University Singers, Charlie Duprey had the opportunity to perform for American composers like Caroline Shaw, Eric Whitacre, and Jake Runestad. During the pandemic, he engaged in a successful virtual choir performance. He brought his choral experience full circle by performing familiar songs like “Send in the Clowns” under the Direction of Dr. Patrick Freer. Charlie Duprey humbly accepted a scholarship for multiple years from the Georgia State School of Music Scholarship Committee. The scholarship honored Bill Lowery, an outstanding Atlanta music publisher and entrepreneur responsible for creating the commercial music program at Georgia State.

Charlie Duprey’s dedication to education is essential to his entrepreneurial journey and unfolding story.
