

Bridget Sullivan
2016-2019 Lombardi Scholar
Innovation Fellows Program - University of Florida
Herbert Wertheim College of Engineering/Warrington College of Business

Bridget Sullivan is a Food & Resource Economics major specializing in Agribusiness Management & Marketing, with a minor in Entrepreneurship. In 2016, she was designated a UF Lombardi Scholar- one of eight students selected from the freshman class to enter the most prestigious group of scholars in the UF Honors Program. As a Lombardi, she joins her scholar cohorts on a unique study-abroad learning experience every summer. Most recently, she traveled to Peru for a service-learning project in a rural community outside of Cusco.

Before attending UF, Bridget took weekly entrepreneurship classes through the Young Entrepreneurs Academy (YEA) program. At age 17, she was selected as a Saunders Scholar after winning the Orlando YEA business pitch competition, where she received startup funding from an investor panel. With this funding, she founded Americamo® LLC, and began to design and sell made-in-America apparel & accessories. In 2017, Americamo® shirts and tank-tops were sold on campus in the Reitz Union as part of the inaugural Gator Retail Hatchery program.

Outside of her economics and entrepreneurship curriculum, Bridget is a freelance graphic designer, writer, and musician. She will graduate from UF's College of Agricultural & Life Sciences in May 2019, and plans on pursuing a career in agribusiness.
