I'm originally from Phoenix, AZ, but now live in Northwest, AR. I completed my first undergraduate degree about five years ago in Economics and Business Strategy from Brigham Young University. Following graduation, I joined Walmart, Inc. as a Senior Manager. Over the course of the last five years, I've grown in my responsibilities and been promoted twice to a Director of Market Strategy and Analytics with 5 individuals reporting to me.

During the pandemic, I realized I needed to fortify my skills in data science and development and enrolled at the University of Florida to study Computer Science. In the last two years, I have only increased my desire to study and love for Computer Science. I intend to take these skills and pivot my career into the data science/software development management space.

On a personal note, I spend my free time exercising—ran/walked over 1600 miles last year, reading books—52 books last year, watching basketball—Go Suns!, volunteering at the Children's Advocacy Center, and spending time with my wife and two children.
